While shopping around for a pair of diamond stud earrings, you will notice that some pair are more expensive than others, some diamonds are bigger than others and some settings are different colors. The more expensive diamonds, are usually the ones with more total carat weight. The total weight of carats, for a pair of diamond stud earrings is the total weight for each earring added together, to make the total weight for the pair of earrings.

You can purchase diamond stud earrings in different color settings. For instance, there is gold, white gold and silver. The amount of karats in the gold settings does make a difference in the price as well. The karat weight in gold is purely a personal preference. If you are purchasing these diamond stud earrings for a gift, notice what color jewelry the recipient wears most often, yellow gold, white gold, or perhaps silver. I would base this decision on the recipient's personal preference.

Diamond stud earrings are always the perfect give to give. You can never go wrong when choosing a pair of diamond stud earrings for someone else. They never go out of style, and they never lose their value. Diamond stud earrings make a very personable gift to give as well.
